CDC, Pharma Giants Angle for Annual COVID Shots Despite ‘Unclear’ Science

A House committee investigating the pandemic last week asked the new director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for documents related to plans the agency may recommend annual COVID-19 shots — as medical experts told The Defender why they believe the science doesn't support such a plan.

The U.S. House of Representatives Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Pandemic wants to know more about plans by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to recommend annual COVID-19 vaccines.

During a July interview with Spectrum News, CDC Director Mandy Cohen said she “anticipate[s] that COVID will become similar to flu shots, where … you get your annual flu shot and you get your annual COVID shot.”

As part of the House investigation into federal COVID-19 vaccination mandates and policies, Rep. Brad Wenstrup (R-Ohio) last week sent a letter to Cohen, stating:

> “It is unclear if the science supports such a recommendation. If this anticipated CDC recommendation occurs, it will mark a significant change in federal policy and guidance regarding COVID-19 vaccines and the way in which they are utilized.”

Wenstrup requested all documents and communications about any annual — “or any other time-based iteration” — recommendation for COVID-19 booster shots, including correspondence between or among the CDC, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (also under the subcommittee's investigation), the White House, the CDC Foundation, CDC contractors and any other CDC stakeholders.

Pfizer, Moderna and Novavax are slated in September to release new single-strain COVID-19 shots targeting the Omicron subvariant XBB.1.5. These vaccines are not yet approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), but manufacturers are following the June 15 recommendations of the FDA's Vaccines and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee (VRBPAC).

The committee of 21 independent advisers in June voted unanimously that any new vaccine should protect against just one strain of the virus — a departure from the available bivalent vaccines — and should target one of the three Omicron subvariants currently circulating, including XBB.1.5.

The XBB.1.5 variant spread globally in the first quarter of 2023, reaching dominance in North America, and other parts of the world by April, according to the FDA's briefing document for the June meeting.

‘We really don't know what the COVID season is’

FDA advisers in January raised concerns about shifting to a yearly schedule for COVID-19 vaccines. Unlike the flu, which thrives in the winter months, COVID-19's spread has proved erratic, consistently mutating into new variants.

Dr. Mark Sawyer, professor of clinical pediatrics at the University of California, San Diego, told CNBC that describing COVID-19 as seasonal “could be problematic” because “we really don't know what the COVID season is.”

Dr. Peter McCullough, author of “The Courage to Face COVID-19: Preventing Hospitalization and Death While Battling the Bio-Pharmaceutical Complex,” told The Defender:

> “COVID-19 respiratory illness is now like a mild head cold. There is no seasonal pattern. The COVID-19 vaccines have failed to stop transmission or protect against hospitalization and death.
> “The products on the market have theoretical efficacy of less than six months. Annual COVID-19 shots have no clinical indication, medical necessity, are not durable for 12 months and have never been tested for use on a yearly schedule.
> “On Dec. 7, 2022 in a U.S. Senate panel on vaccines, I called for all COVID-19 vaccines to be removed from the market because they are not safe for human use. There has been no objection to that testimony from public health officials.”

NBC News reported that Dr. Peter Marks, the FDA's top vaccine regulator, acknowledged during an FDA advisory committee meeting in January that “simplifying the COVID-19 vaccine schedule to be exactly like the flu may not be possible.”

Pfizer hopes otherwise. The drug company's chief scientific officer, Dr. Mikael Dolsten, thinks an annual COVID-19 vaccine would improve vaccine sentiment, telling CNBC the public grew dissatisfied with mandates during the earlier stages of the pandemic.

He said:

> “Unfortunately some people see vaccines as part of that [the mandates].
> “I think of it like the introduction of seat belts for cars. People didn't want to wear them at first, but over time they realized how much seat belts protect them. Now everyone uses them today. That's kind of how the vaccine story needs to be reimagined.”

An annual schedule, Dolsten added, may help people view COVID-19 shots as another “very natural part” of protecting their health.

CDC director ‘very worried about parents not vaccinating kids’

In addition to the ambiguity surrounding COVID-19 vaccine scheduling, there is no consensus among medical experts on which patients would be recommended for an annual jab.

Dr. Paul Offit, a vaccine scientist, professor of pediatrics in the Division of Infectious Diseases at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia and a member of VRBPAC, took issue with not only the annual model but also with administering COVID-19 vaccines to low-risk groups.

Offit told CNN:

> “If the goal of the vaccine is the stated goal, which is protection against severe disease, do you really need a yearly vaccine for otherwise healthy people less than 75? I mean, is this the flu model? Because I would argue it shouldn't be.”

Health advocacy groups and doctors argue against authorizing mRNA shots in young children and babies. As of July 28 — when data were last updated in the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) — there were 6,591 reports of adverse events following COVID-19 vaccination in children under age 6.

Cohen said she is “very worried about parents not vaccinating kids,” telling Spectrum News, “There's plenty of other things that are hard as parents that we can't do. This is one we can do to protect our kids.”

McCullough described Cohen as “fully entrenched in the bio-pharmaceutical complex” and “on the wrong side of every pandemic public health intervention.”

Jeffrey A. Tucker, founder and president of the Brownstone Institute, said Cohen's career has been punctuated by “heartbreaking fear-mongering, pseudo-science, and propaganda,” adding that “she passed with flying colors all three tests of compliance: closures, masking, and vaccine mandates.”

Reduced trust in vaccines and the CDC concerns Cohen, who plans to rehabilitate that trust by focusing on “transparency, execution and building relationships with the public, health leaders and politicians.”

A survey by the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health published in the journal Health Affairs found that roughly a quarter of Americans have little to no trust in the CDC for health information, including 10% who do not trust the agency at all.

The CDC currently recommends the primary series of mRNA shots, or the first two doses of the updated vaccine be given weeks apart, followed months later by a booster shot. The FDA updated its guidance for these shots in August 2022 to contain a bivalent formulation targeting the original viral strain plus the BA.4 and BA.5 Omicron subvariants.

Pfizer is working on a combined flu/COVID-19 vaccine, expected to be available after 2024. Moderna is also working on a “next-gen flu-COVID combo” vaccine. Other vaccine makers are following suit.

all the annual shot will do is keep more spike being shed and circulated. Any exposure to spike is a problem. Everyone on the planet needs ivm, fenben, hcq and vitamins.

"MUST SEE VIDEO… Naomi Wolf: “We Know from the Pfizer Docs that it 'Murders Babies' in the Womb”"

Wolf, the CEO of Daily Clout, told Steve Bannon that HHS was paying OB-GYNs millions of dollars to lie to mothers about the safety of the COVID MRNA Vaccines. Naomi Wolf told Steve that to this very day doctors are incentivized to lie to pregnant women about the safety of the MRNA vaccines and that babies are dying as a result.

'$11 million to bribe OB-GYNs to lie to moms about often-abortifacient MRNA injections.'

The only thing the heads of these vax makers should be slated for is prosecution for crimes against Humanity, in my opinion.

I wonder if Paul Offit unfortunately lost a friend or loved one and, realizing it could be the jabs, is straddling the fence to assuage his conscience while maintaining his vaunted but undeserved status as an "expert".

Every one of those criminals who took part in committing these Crimes Against Humanity should be made to suffer - at least as much as they've made millions of people suffer, from their insane experiment!

Public health officials have not objected to Dr. Peter McCullough's reasoned suggestion COVID vaccines be taken off the market as they are proven (See: Extremely grim VAERS death/injury statistics) unsafe. Public health officials, - in the spirit of (now routine) endless stonewalling with regard to very, very disturbing, legitimate, suggestive-of-major-criminality questions - will issue no objection to the public humiliation their first absolutely bizarre silence/inaction has (rightly) generated.

Mar 4, 2023 First child death due to Pfizer COVID-19 mRNA vaccine compensated - Taiwanese girl 5-11 years old died after 2nd Pfizer jab - government awarded $115,000 to family

This story is important in light of my recent report on 96 Canadian children who died suddenly or unexpectedly in the past 3 months. While there have been many stories of child deaths due to COVID-19 mRNA vaccines, this is the first one that involves government compensation.

Last I checked, my seatbelt never put me in bed for three days, clotted up my veins, caused autoimmunity, or caused my heart to become inflamed. But sure, I'll try to reimagine that getting repetitive covid shots is the same as wearing my seatbelt. smh.

In his latest set of slides of blood samples taken from both “vaccinated” and unvaccinated people, Dr. Philippe van Welbergen demonstrated that the graphene being injected into people is organising and growing into larger fibres and structures, gaining magnetic properties or an electrical charge and the fibres are showing indications of more complex structures with striations.[category scamdemic – corona virus]

He also demonstrated that “shards” of graphene are being transmitted from “vaccinated” to 'vaccine-free or unvaccinated people destroying their red blood cells and causing blood clots in the unvaccinated'.

Dr. Philippe's presentation is truly eye-opening and horrifying – a must-watch, especially for those who proclaim Covid injections are “safe” and are insisting people be injected. The Covid injections are ""weapons of genocide"" and how the people who have designed them are still walking free is incredible.
